OrePac Building Products Expands Manufacturing Capacity across the West Coast
Newly acquired 130,000 sq. foot facility will develop moulding & millwork products

WILSONVILLE, OREGON—OrePac Building Products, a wholesale supplier of interior and exterior building materials, announced today the purchase of a 40-acre/130,000 square foot facility near Roseburg, OR for the purpose of manufacturing moulding and millwork products.

“OrePac has been committed to being the building industry’s most valued partner for more than 45 years,” said Brad Hart, president and CEO of OrePac Building Products. “We looked at MDF’s growing influence in the millwork category and made this investment to meet our customers’ demand for these products.”

OrePac fabricates, assembles, and distributes door and building components at its ten branches across the western United States. The project is the first major greenfield investment into a manufacturing capacity for the western U.S.-based supplier. As part of the deal, OrePac will establish Pacific Manufacturing and Logistics, a wholly owned subsidiary, to operate and manage the facility. The company anticipates that the new plant will open sometime in early 2024 and will employ up to 50 people.

The project is squarely located within the OrePac footprint on the I-5 corridor and is ideally situated to benefit the company and its supplier partners by vertically integrating its supply chain. This acquisition marks a major step in the company’s long-term strategic plan to expand its reach and realize its vision to be the top value-added supplier to the shelter industry.
